

“Charters without Lotteries: Testing Takeovers in New Orleans and Boston”

Disclosure Statement

This research was conducted with financial support from the National Science Foundation under award SES-1426541. Data were provided under data use agreements executed with the Institute for Innovation in Public School Choice, the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, the Boston Public Schools district, and the UP Education Network. Financial and other support and connections to relevant institutions for each author are listed below.

Atila Abdulkadiroğlu is on the scientific advisory board of the Institute for Innovation in Public School Choice, a non-profit 501(c) that provided the New Orleans Recovery School District data. He has received no additional financial support for conducting this research.

Joshua Angrist has a daughter who teaches at the UP Academy Charter School of Boston. He acknowledges financial support from the Institute for Education Sciences (under award R305A120269) and from the Laura and John Arnold Foundation.

Peter Hull has received no additional financial or in-kind support for conducting this research.

Parag Pathak is on the scientific advisory board of the Institute for Innovation in Public School Choice. He acknowledges financial support from the Institute for Education Sciences (under award R305A120269) and from the Laura and John Arnold Foundation.