American Economic Review

To Whom It May Concern:

I, Joshua T. Dean, declare that I have received no financial support from any interested party and hold no positions with any relevant organization relating to the manuscript “Credit, attention, and externalities in the adoption of energy efficient technologies by low-income households,” which we have submitted for publication at the American Economic Review. No party has the right to review the manuscript before publication. The experiment received human subjects IRB approval from both KEMRI in Kenya and The University of California at Berkeley. MIT and The University of Chicago both ceded IRB review to The University of California at Berkeley.

Sincerely,
