

Disclosure for Lamar Pierce

Re: The Negative Consequences of Loss-Framed Performance incentives

Lamar Pierce received no financial compensation for this study. He does, however, serve as an unpaid advisor for Maritz, which helped arrange and facilitate the field experiment with “CarCo”. Maritz provided in-kind support through data and administrative support, as well as two trips to the CarCo headquarters. The authors signed a non-disclosure agreement with Maritz and CarCo that gave CarCo the right to review the paper for anonymity and factual accuracy. The NDA did not, however, give either party the right to edit or withhold publication based on the authors’ analysis, results, or conclusions.
